"Gandhi and Ambedkar: Modern Ideology" is an insightful edited volume that explores the complex and often contentious relationship between two of India's most influential leaders: Mahatma Gandhi and Dr. B.R. Ambedkar. This book brings together a collection of essays and scholarly articles that delve into the ideological differences and commonalities between Gandhi, known for his philosophy of non-violence and emphasis on rural upliftment, and Ambedkar, a champion of social justice and the rights of marginalized communities, particularly the Dalits.

Through a multidisciplinary lens, the contributors analyze the political, social, and cultural impact of both figures on modern India. The book critically examines their contrasting views on caste, religion, and social reform, highlighting how their respective ideologies have shaped contemporary Indian society and governance.

By presenting diverse perspectives from historians, political scientists, and social theorists, "Gandhi and Ambedkar: Modern Ideology" offers a nuanced understanding of the legacies of these two giants. The volume not only revisits their historical contributions but also contextualizes their relevance in today's discussions about equality, democracy, and human rights. It is an essential read for anyone interested in the intersections of politics, philosophy, and social change in India.
